Jennifer Deegan Named NGSA's Director of Energy Markets

(Washington)... Jennifer Deegan, formerly director of regulatory affairs at Washington Gas Light Co., has been named director of energy markets at the Natural Gas Supply Association (NGSA), the association announced today.

"With 15 years of experience in the energy industry, Jennifer brings a wide variety of talents to the NGSA team. Her diverse energy background and familiarity with federal and local regulatory bodies will make her an outstanding member of our team," said NGSA President and CEO Skip Horvath.

As director of energy markets, Deegan will be responsible for all issues related to the balancing of natural gas supply and demand. She will also represent the association at senior level meetings with the administration, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), U.S. Congress, media, industry and the public, serving as a spokeswoman for the association on a multitude of natural gas market issues.

Previously Deegan has also held positions at Pace Global Energy Services, Columbia Energy Group, Columbia Gas Distribution Companies and Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. She also served on the staff of the governor's office of West Virginia.

Deegan graduated cum laude from Shepherd University in Shepherdstown, W. Va., where she received a bachelor's degree in economics and political science. She served on the board of trustees for the Washington Gas Political Action Committee and is a professional member of the Energy Bar Association.

NGSA also announced that Public Affairs Director Mark Stultz will also take on the primary responsibility for the association's legislative affairs.

NGSA represents integrated and independent companies that produce and market natural gas in the United States. NGSA is actively involved in pursuing regulatory and legislative issues that affect the association's members. Established in 1965, NGSA encourages expanded use of natural gas and supports regulatory and legislative actions that foster competitive markets.
