

Daphne Magnuson
Director of Strategic Communications

Daphne Magnuson is director of strategic communications for the Natural Gas Supply Association. She joined NGSA in 2009 and also provides communications support to the Center for LNG (CLNG) since it merged with NGSA in 2016.

Daphne works with the media, other organizations and member companies to communicate about natural gas, the natural gas industry and NGSA policies through written and electronic materials, events and other opportunities.

Daphne has been a public affairs and communications professional in the energy industry since 1997. Before joining NGSA, she worked for the Electric Power Supply Association as vice president of public affairs, representing competitive power suppliers. Prior to that, she was senior director for public relations and communications at the American Gas Association, representing natural gas utilities for 10 years.

In her pre-energy career, she worked for Congress, campaigns and the media, including ABC News, where she was the publicist for the shows This Week With David Brinkley, ABC World News Saturday, ABC World News Sunday and Business World.

Daphne earned a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Virginia.
