NGSA Statement on FERC Gas Day Scheduling Decision

(Washington, D.C.) -The Natural Gas Supply Association (NGSA) released the following statement in response to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's (FERC) decision to retain the current start of the natural gas "day" at 9 a.m. Central.

Pat Jagtiani, executive vice president of NGSA said, "We applaud the Commission for listening to the voices of the entire natural gas industry and keeping the current Gas Day start time of 9 a.m. Central rather than making sweeping, national changes to address limited issues occurring in regional power markets."

Dena Wiggins, president and CEO of NGSA said, "We are encouraged by the Commission's current initiative to assess how each regional power market is addressing fuel assurance. We believe that effort will yield insights and opportunities to address improvements in gas-electric coordination that are more effective than changing the clock on Gas Day."
